

LITTLE JOE IN TEARS.

Italian Consul Will Be Asked to Get a Habeas Corpus.

Grief-Stricken Mother Gives Premature Birth to a Child.

"Let Them Appeal," Says Gerry. "If They Are Not Satisfied."

Commodore Gerry, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, was asked by an Evansville woman reporter this morning whether he would take any action looking towards the release of Joe, the six-year-old child of Peter and Sebastiana Millicci, of 243 Elizabeth street.

"If the parents are not satisfied," was his answer, "let them appeal from the committee."

"Let them appeal," he reiterated again when the circumstances of the case were discussed again.

"But the parents are poor," persisted the reporter. "If you will only investigate, you will assure yourself, Mr. Gerry, that the parents are just one. There are a number of good and influential people who know the Milliccis, and who will help you for the sake of humanity to investigate."

"I am satisfied that my agents have done their duty," replied Mr. Gerry coldly, and with this he turned away to subjects more agreeable to contemplation.

M. A. Young, of 20 East Fourteenth street, who had been behind the Milliccis, as related yesterday in THE EVENING WORLD, has called on the Italian Consul to intercede for little Joe, and will institute habeas corpus proceedings in a day or two.

Joe is a beautiful boy with delicate features and big dreamy eyes. On Oct. 28, Justice Ryan committed him to an asylum in Freshkill, for the alleged offense of peddling papers and begging on the streets.

Under ordinary circumstances the parents are given a warning if their children are guilty of such an offense for the first time, but for some reason the custom was dispensed with in little Joe's case, and although Gerry's agents admitted that the child had been arrested for an asylum, Justice Ryan committed him to an asylum.

"I was in court," said Joe's mother, the father, "but I did not understand the questions they asked me, as I speak only Italian. The first thing I took in was when I was made to understand that my little boy would be torn away from me and his mother and that we would not have his custody again for fifteen years."

"My poor wife was ill at the time, and although I pleaded with the judge, he said that he was sent away, they returned her that consolation."

Mrs. Millicci looked much worse this morning than she did when an Evansville woman reporter called on her the other day. Her eyes were red with weeping, and her whole demeanor indicated the suffering she had undergone.

Indeed the Italian mother in her grief and worry over the loss of her little boy was premature in her assumption that he would survive. And even this fact had no effect in touching the hearts of denizens, Gerry or the agents or drawing from them word of sympathy for the unhappy parents, according to Mrs. Young.

"My husband is a good man," said the unhappy woman, "and always provided well for his family. He never drank or gambled, and he was a good father. He permitted our eldest boy, Peter, who is thirteen years old, to sell newspapers that was his own business and because Peter was anxious to work."

"Oh," she cried, as the reporter left, "try to get our little darling back again."

"I can never live without him," a good sister at the home of the sisters of the Fair of 1901, at 141 West Third-street, where Joe was taken, said. "I would give anything to get him back."

With this the poor woman burst into tears again.

HAPPY WERE THESE BRIDES.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland at the Benedict-Coudert Wedding.

President-elect and Mrs. Cleveland attended the wedding last evening of Miss Virginia Marie Coudert, the daughter of Frederic H. Coudert, to Frederic H. Benedict, the son of Mr. Cleveland's maternal grandfather.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, 13 East Forty-fifth street, by Archbishop Corrigan, assisted by Father O'Donnell.

Among the many guests were Justices Anderson and Patterson, ex-Mayor Grace and Commissioner Gallup.

Miss Marie Tarleton Goldwater, daughter of Dr. Harold Goldwater, and Dr. John H. Hook, of Bellevue Hospital, were married yesterday in Grace Church church. Rev. Dr. Huntington performed the ceremony.

G. Tarleton Goldwater was the bridegroom, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marie Tarleton, of Baltimore, and Miss Grace Benton, of Mobile. Many Southern guests of New York were among the guests.

MISS TURNBULL'S $1,000 SHARE.

Stays the Reincorporation of the "Journal of Commerce."

The trustees of the Journal of Commerce are trying to reincorporate it having been recently discovered by David M. Stone and William C. Prince, the President and Treasurer of the Company respectively, that the original incorporation expired in 1886. The mistake arose from the fact that no one had examined the articles of incorporation for more than twenty-five years, and it was supposed that the agreement did not terminate till 1890.

When they came to reorganize, however, it was found that Miss Ellen M. Turnbull, of Baltimore, who held one $1,000 share of the stock, objected to the plan and would not sell out for less than $15,000.

This was regarded as an extravagant demand, and the plan was abandoned. Miss Turnbull and other stockholders to compel the winding up of the affairs of the corporation.

Miss Turnbull in her answer stated her belief that there was no misunderstanding as to the date of expiration of the articles of incorporation, and declares that the President and Treasurer had been aware of the fact that the corporation was an unincorporated association of the profits of the corporation without the knowledge of the other stockholders. This is denied by Mr. Stone and Mr. Prince.

LUTHERANS CELEBRATE.

They Will Form a State and National Organization.

The Lutherans of New York and Brooklyn celebrated the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther at Association Hall last night. The chief speaker was Rev. J. B. Henningsen, of the St. James Lutheran Church.

Two delegates from each association will be appointed to form a State and National Lutheran organization.

Social Honors to Don Dickinson. Democratic Campaign Chairman Don M. Dickinson was last night the guest of honor at a dinner given by ex-Secretary Patrocinio, of the New York State Democratic Party, at the home of Henry Villard, and to-morrow night will be the guests of ex-Mayor Grace.

MUST ASK FOR THE MONEY.

Board of Estimate Will Hear the Art Museum Trustees.

Appropriation Can Be Easily Increased if Cause Is Properly Shown.

The complaint of the trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in regard to the appropriation for the support of the museum for the ensuing year has kicked up a rumpus in official circles.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment has set apart $250,000 additional for the Museum for 1933, whereas last winter's law authorized them to give $700,000 if necessary.

The trustees claim that they will need at least $600,000 extra for the coming year, and declare that the $250,000 will barely cover the loss of revenue which they will suffer from being obliged to give up their pay days and annual membership.

They intimate that if the city does not give the money they want they would prefer to move the art collections, which are private property, away from Central Park.

The members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment are very much stirred up about the matter. Commissioner Barker pointed triumphantly to the fact that the Park Commissioners had only asked for an appropriation of $100,000 for the two museums, and that the city had given them $150,000, which is $50,000 additional to each.

"We gave them every cent they asked for," he said, "and it is not the business of our board to look into the amounts asked for by the different departments to see whether or not they do not really need more than they demand. Sometimes we cut them down, but we don't increase them."

If the trustees of the Museum of Art think they are not being treated fairly let them go to the Park Commissioners, and blame us. I don't see what more we could have done for them under the circumstances."

Comptroller Myer said: "We have another meeting in December, when we make up the final estimates. Let them come before us then and explain the situation and we will see what we can do."

He stated that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment promised them $250,000 for next year and that we asked for the passage of this law. They are in error. I know that no such promise was ever made by me and I am certain that it was given by any other member of the Board."

"This threatening to move the collections out of the Park is a very foolish thing in my opinion, and seems entirely unnecessary. If the Trustees need more money and are entitled to receive it from the city, we will be glad to hear anything they have to say when we meet to discuss the budget. This is the first I have heard of this dissatisfaction. I must confess I don't see why the city should run it."

Park Commissioner Gallup declined to express any opinion in the controversy. Mayor Grant said he had not even read the letter of the Art Committee to the trustees. He thought, however, that if the Museum directors had not received a fair appropriation, the matter should be recorded and adjusted at the final meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment next month.

GEASON NOW CRIES FRAUD.

His Opponents Say His Own Penury-ousness Beat Him.

The Geason Democracy of Long Island City claim to have unearthed sufficient testimony to connect the Jefferson Club with fraud and bribery at the polls, and to have found more fraudulent votes than to Horatio A. Sanford.

It is claimed that over 300 of the ballots cast for Sanford have the latter's name on the back as a mark of identification, and that over 100 of Geason's ballots were thrown out of the box.

Geason's opponents claim that the Standard Oil Company contributed $10,000, the Long Island Railroad $5,000, Calvary Cemetery $7,500 and John D. Crimmins, of New York, $2,500 to defeat him.

At present investigating crime in Long Island City he said today.

"I take the case of the courts as soon as my duties as Grand Juror are completed, and I will make some startling revelations concerning the fraud committed by my opponents in their mad desire to get control of the city's affairs."

A prominent member of the Jefferson Club laughed at the above story, and said: "The truth is the matter, we had money and organization at our back. Geason had the organization, but he was too penurious to put up any money. In spite of all his blarney, he didn't spend 10 cents in the campaign. That's what beat him."

HE IS AN UNWELCOME VISITOR.

A Sheriff's Keeper at the Manhattan Athletic Club-House.

A most unwelcome visitor at the Manhattan Athletic Club today is a sheriff's keeper, put there by Deputy Sheriff James Carragher, to protect an execution which he holds against the club for $1,120.

There are no privileges extended to this visitor, but he is there to stay until that judgment and execution are satisfied.

The creditor is J. Broadhead Woolsey, who holds promissory notes against the Manhattan Athletic Club.

The usual procedure in these cases is to wait six days, and then the judgment is entered. But Deputy Sheriff Carragher says he does not believe he will have to go to that extent in this instance. He has been assured that the club will pay the amount of the judgment.

An open letter to women. No. 2.

May 25, '92, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Dear Madam:

"I want to tell you what your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done for me."

"I was so bad with falling of the womb and Leucorrhoea that I could not stand."

"I had doctored so much without benefit I was entirely discouraged. I thought I had to die."

"One evening I read in the 'Herald' about your medicine. I got some, and took 2 bottles of the Compound, and used one of the Sanative Wash."

"I believe it saved my life. I am now well and strong, am never troubled with either of the complaints. If more women would use your Compound, there would be less suffering in the world."

LIEUT. SALICRUP IS READY.

He Was Simply Too Busy to Fight the Other Day.

Wants a Rude Stranger to Know He's Not a Coward.

Lieut. James Salicrup is a Cuban and a fighter. Although he is at present quietly and peaceably representing the Paragas Company, which has offices at 59 William street, he has spent most of his life in warfare and earned his military title in the Cuban army of revolutionists and fighting Spaniards.

The monotony of Lieut. Salicrup's business life is today disturbed by his earnest desire to meet face to face the only man who ever called him a coward and "got away with it."

According to the Lieutenant this insult is an American and a Republican; but like most Republicans, although for entirely different reasons, he is afraid to disclose his identity. He said, accordingly, Lieut. Salicrup has advertised for his opponent as follows:

The gentleman who abused the writer yesterday morning and called him a coward before a great crowd of people, I am sure, will have a chance to see the terrible mistake he made when he called me a coward. I will call upon him at 59 William street.

This advertisement had been in print over a day and a half, and yet the challenger had not shown up. It is also possible that he will never show up.

Lieut. Salicrup was cool, but very much in earnest when seen by an EVENING WORLD reporter today. "I was the morning after election. I was trying to get through the crowd in front of the newspaper office, and I was hit in the head in Park row, being on my way from Brooklyn to office."

"I noticed this man in particular and tried to avoid him, as he was very nervous and appeared to be like a man who had lost money on the election."

He brushed rudely against me, but did not apologize. Afterwards I was pushed by the crowd against him, and when he swore at me and threatened to strike me I told him I would not let him do that. I told him I would not let him do that. I told him I would not let him do that."

"Then this man called me a coward. Yes, sir, and I answered him with a word. I said, 'I am not a coward.' I said, 'I am not a coward.' I said, 'I am not a coward.'"

"Some people have different ideas of courage. I do not think it would have shown courage on my part to have fought him then and there and given him a black eye. And then probably the people would have kept us from fighting."

"Supposing we had fought for half an hour? Corbett and Sullivan fought longer than that, but neither was hurt. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled."

"I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. I told him that the conditions were not yet fulfilled."

WHIMSICAL ELECTION BETS.

Peculiar Penalties for Backing Presidential Preferences.

One Bettor's Tale of Woe to the Tenderloin Precinct Police.

The eccentric person who makes whimsical wagers on political elections is very much in evidence this year. There is Lawyer Waldorf B. Phillips, of 245 Broadway, going out in these post-election days with a beard stubble that makes him look as if he had been sitting for a vagrant's portrait. In consequence of a wager made with his elevator boy, he will go unshaven till Dec. 1.

To-morrow night Samuel Greenberg, the Hester street furniture dealer, a red-hot Republican, will entertain his Twenty-fourth Assembly District friends by turning in a wheelbarrow Louis Rudolph, the Grand street real estate man, a fervent Democrat, from the store of Dr. Yankauer, 3438 Third avenue to Harlem Bridge, at 10 o'clock to-morrow night. There will be a brass band and fireworks.

A large crowd of Borden town people gathered at Staple's barber shop yesterday and witnessed the shaving of Abraham Garwood's hair. Whiskers and his wife saw his chin last night for the first time in thirty-five years.

Dr. Bell, of Long Branch, gave Edward Van Dyke a wheelbarrow ride through that village yesterday in payment of an election bet.

Townley Crane, of Asbury Park, is wearing a tall white hat with a mourning weed and a defiant Harrison rooster on it. John Hubbard, of Elizabeth, N. J., was treated to a lamb roast with William Dinkel, a Harrison man, last night.

That is, a "hot" hearth, Pearl and Fulton streets, had the most thrilling experience yet reported. Jacob is a Harrison man, and he bet a suit of clothes, a top hat and a pair of shoes on the election. He lost.

Krauss ordered the clothes of Leberg's tailor yesterday. Leberg came around and protested on the ground that Krauss bet that Cleveland would be the next President, and that the conditions were not yet fulfilled. Krauss refused to take the bet, and Leberg appeared at the fourth at station a little later, where he told Serf. Lane that Krauss had pounded him on the head. As Leberg bore no evidences of injury the Sergeant refused to interfere.

Almost everybody has something on the election, even the ladies "backing their opinions." There are three especially adventurous young women in the law class at the University. One is a demure little churchwoman, another is a charming Buckeye blonde, of Republican convictions, and the third is a New York beauty with flashy black eyes, hair dark as night and a Democratic to the tips of her dainty fingers.

The Ohio girl and the Knickerbocker maiden bet the next President will be Cleveland. The Buckeye blonde bet for Taft, and the New York beauty bet for Wilson. They are all betting on the election, and they are all betting on the election.
